

Blue (One Page Sample)

By

Aslan Hollier

Benson tries to deal with the loss of his wife Angelica. This is an unnatural love story that could only happen "once in a blue moon". He tries to rid himself of guilt, and magically bring back the one he can't live without.

Aqueous Lion Productions

aslanhollier@gmail.com

He falls to his knees, pressing the rose to his nose, and sobs.

STORYTELLER (V.O.)

The mind and eyes cry for her as it all rushes through. The rose brings him back to you.

He stares at the rose as he twirls it in his fingers.

He smiles.

BENSON

Remember when I asked you to share our lives together? Blue Roses, that's what you are to me. Blue Roses.

STORYTELLER (V.O.)

Taken back to the greatest moment in life.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. - BENSON'S HOUSE - NIGHT

Benson and Angelica Darling are sitting at a glass table with two chairs.

ANGELICA DARLING, mid-late twenties, short, voluptuous, long dark hair, and pale skin. She is wearing a sparkling black dress, a diamond jewelry.

STORYTELLER (V.O.)

A time when the darling angel agreed to be his wife. Can never forget, and things couldn't have been better.

The moonlight shines through onto the table.

On the table is a glass vase with two blue roses, two lit long slim candles, wine glasses with red wine, and other signs of finishing dinner.

STORYTELLER (V.O.)

There are two roses, two people, and two sides to all of them together.

Benson smiles at her with loving eyes while she fiddles with her wine glass, staring at the roses.